

This is the story of the giant redwoods trees of Headwaters Forest. A long time ago, Native Americans, who called themselves the Wiyotts, lived in peace with the animals and the trees. There were eagles, hawks and owls that flew in the sky. There were salmon and otters that swam in the rivers. There were bears, mountain lions, foxes and flying squirrels that lived in the forest.