

Pacific Lumber tried to do the right thing. They never cut down all the trees at once. That way there would always be forests, animal homes and jobs for the future. When the logger was finished for the day, the forest would still be there.